

Article 261: Is Your Language Right For You?

You are stuck with language and cannot knowingly act outside of language, for language is not only a means of communicating with others, it is your way of communicating awarenesses, feelings, and ideas to yourself and others, ...in fact, language is the basis for all feelings and thoughts. Ohh, certainly, sensations and mental activities occur, but to move beyond random reactions into emotions and mindful actions, language is necessary, ...the only problem is that in creating language to understand the universe and ourselves ...and to communicate those awarenesses, along with our feelings and ideas, we imposed our language on the universe, then, believing the universe followed this limited pattern, we have lived and struggled against our false constructs and limited language-beliefs•feelings ever since.

A language based on opposites and dualities is false, for nothing in the universe has an unthing, an opposing opposite, or a completely other-half, ...these are all false constructs of language ...as are all judgments, contradictions, and conflicts.

A language based on cause and effect is false, for nothing in the universe is or ever has been caused, ...all things miraculously arise uncaused from nothing~ex nihilo.

A language based on subject/action/object is false, creates and maintains the concept and appearances of separation, and establishes endless confusing misbeliefs.

A language based on things is false and unknowable ...simply because all things are actions ...and only known by their actions, ...therefore, your language of things keeps you from ever knowing who or what you are.

A language based on relative values is false. The universe offers all things equally and alike ...and shows no preference for one thing as better, finer, more-appropriate or desirable, wiser, greater, or lesser than any other thing. The universe displays no favorites.

A language that conveys past, present, future is false and misleading for though time as a measure of change does exist, all things exist in the past and are only known in the past.

A language based on known and unknown things is false, for all things are clearly and fully revealed; ...all things are knowable.

A language based on growing, developing, learning is false, for all things are fully developed as they are, ...and what you observe as personal growing, developing, and learning is merely lessening of your self-imposed limitations and restrictions to being and living the expansiveness of yourself.

A language based on begin-end, birth-death, start-finish is false, for all things are continuous.

A language of change is false, for all things. Being ever-changing in an ever-changing world, are immortal and changeless.

A language that presents a universe to be lived in is false, for, in your world, you are your youniverse ...and the youniverse for you is you.

A language that creates not-things is false and deceiving, for obviously, a thing that is not ...is not ...and cannot exist in reality ...or in the language.

A language which seems to limit your free will is false, for free will, being pre-eminent in the universe, cannot be limited, obscured, withheld, or destroyed.

The way you use language is important to the way you think, to what you believe, to how you visualize life ...and yourself in life, and to your selfimage, and to your life and relationships, ...but more fundamental than the way you use language is its structure, which limits you ...and leads you to believe most things about yourself and life which are simply not true, for life is far different and more-expansive than the views offered through your present language. This does not mean to deny or avoid thought and live "no mind", it does not mean to rely on feelings ...for knowing these sensations and movements returns your mind and understanding to language, and it certainly does not mean to transcend mind to an unknown consciousness ...for this will also limit and restrict you, ...the wise choice is to think and language as your youniverse truly expresses in all goodness ...and rely upon that.

By being aware of all that may be false in your thoughts and feelings, you open yourself to revelations that are true for you, for thinking does not limit you, only your particular thoughts, and your language-created emotions, do that, ...but you have the power to change your limiting language-thoughts and emotions ...and attain a fuller sense of an empowered self with tremendous conscious awareness, ...and by being receptive to awarenesses beyond your limiting language-imposed emotions and thoughts and beliefs, you will find yourself renewed in every moment. By refusing to limit your thinking and feelings and believing and actioning to your present language, you expand your self and life far beyond your greatest dreams, inspire greater possibilities, destroy the outpicturings of painful beliefs•thoughts•attitudes, and end feelings of vulnerability ...as you create the fulfilling meaning of life within you and all around you.

Well, enough of this about the structure of your present language, ...you know it is false and misleading, but you are addicted to using it ...and you don't really want to change yourself or your language, ...and you really don't believe that its use is all that bad or deceiving ...or destructive, ...do you?