

Article 378: Supplant Conscious -part 3

The purpose of these illustrations of privileged beings ...and of your choosing how you will be alive ...and always and only living that empowering choice through offering and supplant consciousness ...which enlivens your personal key to eternal knowing is to overreach, which means to overturn or overcome without opposing, ...to overreach lifetimes of static or dead believing, thinking, living on "all levels" ...and open your eyes and mind to a broader and grander awareness of your self ...and all of life, ...what will inspire you to create and live such a self and life?

Behaviorists have shown that by breaking down any action into small parts and giving rewards at each step along the way ...they can train pigeons to play a tiny piano, ...however, in all of this, though the pigeons are well-trained, they are untaught, ...in the same way, you are well-trained by language but remain untaught!

Train means to coach or accustom one, or pigeons or you, to some mode of behavior or performance; to make one, or pigeons or you, proficient in an action through specialized instruction and practice, ...however, teach means to impart knowledge or skill' to give instruction, ...do you understand the difference? ...the pigeons are well-trained but never instructed, and, in the same way, you are well-trained by language but never really instructed about yourself or the world around you, in fact, language distorts everything to language.

And though the pigeons are obviously aware of the piano, they cannot be considered conscious of what a tiny piano is ...or what the song is they are playing; ...in the same way, though through language you are aware of yourself and things around you, you cannot be considered conscious of what or whom you are ...or what other individuals and they in your life are ...either, ...so what is your precious duality languaging and your languaged-self and life really offering you?

Like these pigeons, religions, philosophers, healers, and so-called-teachers~and even language itself~have used language and rewards to train you to their beliefs and point-of-view, ...and in that have taught you little or nothing, ...and what little was taught was distorted through language ...which left you ignorant.

This does not mean that you are illiterate or nescient, it is just that, through language, you are sadly deceived. You may have great knowledge of the languaged world around you and follow many beliefs about that world, the problem is that these are misinformed language-constraints ...with little awareness or understanding, because your duality language clouded your mind, blinded you, and limited your hearing ...all of which dulled and distorted your senses ...making you insensitive to eternal empowerment ...and life as you truly desire.

Do not attempt to cleanse or uncondition your mind and body and life of such training and errors, or struggle to overcome them, instead, mind anew or overreach these conditionings through describing; ...continue languaging at your peril and disappointment!

Do not seek refuge from the world you've languaged around you in an inner-world ...or in emotions, for your "inner-world" and emotions and trained are trained in language as well, ...instead, fully engage in life as you "truly desire" through offering.

Through all of your lives ...you have followed language and the "rewards" of your emotions to the self and life you are conscious of today, ...how were your rewards? ...have your languaged choices and emotions brought you the conscious rewarding self and life you truly desire? ...or have you followed language and emotional rewards to a self and life you have been trained for? ...and can accept and tolerate? ...if so, is that self and life still enough for you?

When language "forces" you to make a decision, do you have any basis other than immediate emotional rewards to guide your decision and actions? ...if so, what unerringly guides you? ...for both conscious beliefs or unconscious reactive emotions are not reliable ...are they?

By expanding one supportable theorem to include the next and the next and the next, Euclid created an unassailable system of geometry; ...following this same pattern of expanding your beliefs independent of language ...you can create and live a personally-enlarged realized-self and way for life, ...of course, each belief and concept must always affirm how you have chosen you will be alive ...and fully support that choice with the self and life you truly desire ...without contradicting any previous belief or concept, ...and each belief and concept must remain unproved and unprovable, each added belief and concept must follow or grow out of what was previously declared. No matter how enticing and rewarding extraneous ideas, theories, actions, relationships, or possibilities may seem to be, do not add them to your self and life ...at least not until they can be reasonably deduced from what has previously supported your always and only living the way you have chosen you will be eternally alive ...as you truly desire.

But, whatever you do, do not destroy or discard those extraneous idea, theories, actions, relationships, or possibilities, let them remain as an overreaching of the self and life you believe and declare you will live, for, later those same or similar matters and individuals might be completely workable, desirable, and supportive in the ever-expanding self and life you are creating and living.

All of your life you have chosen between this and that ...and then chosen again and again without understanding the expansiveness of choosing. Unfortunately, you have followed the pattern of languaged-choosing, which is “making a choice between things or alternatives; deciding on a preference”. Choosing suggests deciding wisely ...independent of whether or not you like the choice. Language-choosing sets things and choices in opposition, for you to “perceptively” decide upon the best choice, ...but how? ...how can you possibly “know” the best of opposing alternatives? Choosing between this or that keeps you and your life in constant opposition and turmoil ...with no resolution in sight, ...maybe we should borrow from Euclid and reconsider language-choosing.

Well, as I said before, in creating an unassailable system of geometry, Euclid expanded one supportable theorem to include the next and the next and the next. By following the same pattern of accretion, you can fully expand your beliefs and life ...and have an eternal and unassailable self and life ...which begins with one supportable theorem, such a how you will be alive, and expand that by always and only being and living that in the next moment ...and the next and the next.

“But”, you might ask, “don’t I have to choose in each of these moments? ...how can I know what choice to make? If I’m going to always and only live the choice of how I will be alive, ...don’t I have to make right choices? ...or even wise choices? How can I know what is right? ...or even best for me?”

Never make a languaged-choice! ...and never between this or that! Follow Euclid’s example of starting with how you will be eternally alive, then, instead of choosing between this or that, let OR be an acronym and reminder of overreaching, ...make any choice, which is choosing without opposition, and overreach that choice ...following the pattern of how you will always and only be alive, ...and overreach that in the next moment ...and the next and the next to a completely fulfilling and satisfying, unassailable, eternal self and life.

Is there anything more or wiser than that you could desire?